MARKET COMMENTARY:

1. Local market delivered another negative day on pandemic damage to the economy while US market was shut for Thanksgiving holiday. Global investors turned negative on currency/value trade in recent days after being mainly positive for nearly 4 weeks. All major sectors were in the red with a couple of positive sub sectors in Property and Gold. USD and Bonds were moving higher on risk off but that will reverse over long time. US Fed will be forced to expand the balance sheet to keep yields under control. Balance sheet expansion will debase USD and drive Gold and other commodities higher in the long term. The problem with this strategy is that debasing USD will raise inflation. Technically speaking, US Fed is going to create inflation while trying to water down bond market expectations of reflation. This contradiction is why Central Banks get it wrong and blow up asset bubbles!!!

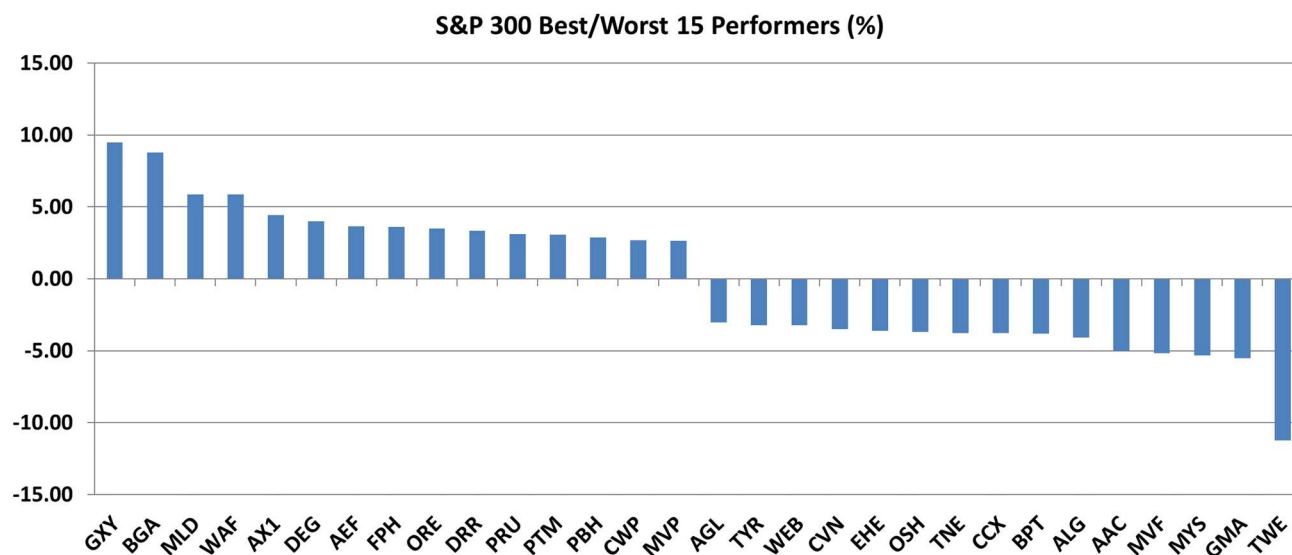

Growth to value rotation is structural and it has started. It will play out over the next year or two with reflation trade. US Fed is going to debase USD to buy time and allow deleveraging but US corporates do not have a strong economic growth to execute that change. The result is likely to be higher unemployment and rising bankruptcies. Trump administration looks like cleaning house to prepare for the inevitable exit. Pardons are expected to be delivered like burgers at McDonalds to protect the insiders. There are more turkeys that needs to be pardoned to remove them from being the weakest link in future legal issues for the President and his family!!!

Markets are running on the hope that economy and corporate earnings will return to pre pandemic level. US Fed and RBA rate cut cycles (i.e. as seen below) were collapsing in 2019 and that is pre pandemic. Global economy was falling into recession in 2019 and that is our best case scenario in the next year. It is time to bet against the historical high market multiple when the best case scenario is heading to recession or substantial weak growth for years!!!

Remain nimble, contrarian and cautiously pragmatic with elevated global macro risks!!! Buckle up...it's going to get bumpy!!!

European markets overnight - Reuters

European shares moved little on Thursday as an extension of coronavirus restrictions in Germany and a grim growth forecast for the United Kingdom brought the focus back to the near-term economic damage caused by the COVID-19 pandemic.

The pan-European STOXX 600 index ended down 0.1%, with gains in tech and healthcare offset by declines in automobile and energy .SXP shares.

A second wave of coronavirus infections coupled with rising COVID-19 related deaths continues to sweep across Europe, prompting Germany, France and the United Kingdom to once again impose tough curbs, dealing a heavy blow to business activity as restaurants, gyms and shops remained closed.

"While it is still too early to say if the investor optimism is hurt as the wider market is still in an uptrend, there are plenty of negative headlines out there for investors to wait and think of the near-term effects," said Connor Campbell, a financial analyst at Spreadex.

The benchmark STOXX 600 index is however still on course for its best month on record and market participants expect European equities to touch record highs next year, following promising vaccine trial results from three major drugmakers.

British shares were the worst hit with the benchmark FTSE 100 index down 0.4% after health minister Matt Hancock announced that several parts of England will be forced to live under the toughest category of COVID-19 restrictions when a national lockdown ends on Dec. 2.

Britain's domestically focused mid-cap index dropped 0.9% after finance minister Rishi Sunak said that the record public borrowings were not sustainable, following his warning on Wednesday that the economy was on course to shrink by 11.3% this year.

Chancellor Angela Merkel said that Germany will face restrictions on public life for the foreseeable future.

Germany's blue-chip DAX ended flat while France's benchmark CAC 40 erased gains to end 0.1% lower after a survey showed consumer confidence in the country fell to a two-year low in November.

In company news, British insurer Aviva dropped 0.2% after saying it expects to pay a total 2020 dividend that is a third less than before the coronavirus outbreak.

British pub operators Mitchells & Butlers and Fuller, Smith & Turner fell 0.7% and 5.4% after they announced around 1,650 job cuts as the hospitality industry reels from new lockdowns.
